COVINGTON BUSINESS NOTES. IMPROVE YOUR LEBURE HOURS.

We have in this community, growing up to man hood, a large number of boys and young men, who are deprived by the circumstances of their callings, from attending the public or private schools during the day, but who are nevertheless anxious to secure to themselves the advantages of education. To all such, and to young ladies as well as young men, an excellent opportunity is offered by the evening school established at the Covington Commercial College, Sixth and Madison streets. Writing, Bookkeeping, Arithmetic, and Orthography are taught, with other branches where required. But the main object is to assist the pupils who attend to such knowledge as will be of the most practical use to them in the transaction of the everyday business of life. The room are well heated, and lighted, and ventilated, and provided with all the appliances for pursuing the various studies with comfort and profit. The ex pense of the tuition is so small as to be within the means of every one, and those who wish to im themselves should call and see the evening

BELLEVUE, KY.

The entertainment in aid of the yellow fever orphans in the School Hall last night was a great success, the hall being crowded as it never was before. The entertainment opened with a piano solo by Miss Susie Pownall, who rendered it in a very artistic rownin, who rendered it in a very artistic style. The solo of Mr. John G. Luhn was heartily applauded. The address of Mark Antony over the body of Cæsar was recited by Mr. Adam Smyrl in a very creditable manner, and was much of a surprise to his friends. The duet on the piano by Miss Ella Read and Miss Ella Straffer was capital. The reading of "Shamus O'Brien" by Mr. Charles F. Sharp was good. He re-sponded by another reading more suited to his voice. The solo-from Schubert by Mrs. Numann, accompanied on the flute by Mr. Louis Schultz, was the best feature of the evening They were heartily encored. The harmonica solo of Mr. John Schibley was narnonica soio of Mr. John Schloley was rendered in his capital style. Mr. Frank B. Wentworth recited "Somebody's Dar-ling" in a way that needs no words of praise from us. Miss Sallie Edwards' singpraise from us. Miss Sallie Edwards' sing-ing was the best we have heard and was deservedly encored, to which she kindly responded. By request Mr. Wm. Dresser sang from the opera of "Maritana," Mr. Dresser has a clear, rich voice, and he ren-dered the selection very beautifully. The fantastic piano solo of Miss Ella Read was clearwish does in style and test. Mr. charmingly done in style and laste. Mr. Frank McIlvaine, whose name was not on the programme, was called on, and ren-dered several of his funny songs to the delight of the audience. Great credit is due to all who took part in the catertainment, as well as to Mayor Morgad, Mr. Wm. H. Nixon and the committee who had it in charge, Messrs, Chas, W. Nagel, H. Lawton, Adam Smyrl, Will. L. Gould and P. W. Danky. The exactamount of money raised will be known in a few days.

Lower Level Love.-Both are rich, and have spent many seasons at Saratoga: names Willie and Minnie. The mother says the have been engaged to each other since childhood; that both have been reared with care and tenderness, and though she does say it, both are "well-born," and that the wedding ceremony will soon take place. They live in the city of Boston. The following conversation took place between them in my hearing: Minnie-I don't like mountains-they are Minne-1 don the mountains—they are so—so big and dirty. Do you, Willie dear? Willie—No, indeed. Minnie, I don't. Great, awkward, uncouth things, and are so—so much in the way, too. But when I left Boston Uncle Charles told me I must take you up on Pike's Peak. Minnie-Oh, Willie, do you think I would ride up there on a vulgar mule-the ideah so absurd-no, never, never! Willie! I shall faint!

Willie-Oh, dear Minnie, don't faint, I will stay down here in the sweet valley with you until the others return .- [Color-

Women Kissing.—Did you ever see two women kiss each other? It's very funny. They sidle up toward each other and smile a dry sort of smile, then they both jab for-ward and their lips come together with an ununctuous dryness that has no suction, o warmth, or life about it. How different when there is a young man with a mous Then they draw tache in the business! down to each other gently, but firmly, get good solid hold with their feet and hands, the eyes fondly, tenderly, meltingly gaze into each other, the lips meet first with a gentle pressure, then more pressure, and more, until you think their teeth will give way, and all the time the suction would discount a force pump. Oh, there's a won-derful difference!

PERFECTLY LOVELY .- "I love you! I take your bright face between my hands once more, and gaze into your glorious eyes and kiss them tenderly and with a love that even the most perfect kiss can never ex-I love you!"-[From the new novel, "Like Unto Like."

THE CHARMS OF DUBUQUE.—The Dubuque (Iowa) Times of a recent date says: A stranger yesterday in looking over Dubuque for the first time, admired the place very much for its substantial buildings, elegant much for its substantial buildings, eigennarchitecture and picturesque scenery. He had traveled extensively both in Europe and America, and freely said that he had seen no more beautiful place than Dubuque. The Catskills and the Hudson, he said, were classic, but Iowa's chief city and the Missis-

I kiss your forehead, shrine of a brilliant and noble intellect, and kiss your white hands, as I would kiss your feet, with a pure and manly love which is too genuine either to exalt or debase itself, and too sincere to see homage of a servile kind in any form of acknowledgment of an absorbing and overwhelming and inspiring affection

Physicians yersus Metaphysicians.

Last night an astronomer was standing in his observatory carefully seanning the heavens with the far reaching eye of the telescope. In a room below, the geologist was studying the constitution of our planet from the specimens of rocks scattered around him. The difference between the occupations of these two men exactly expresses the difference between the physicians and metaphysicians. While the metaphysician is searching the illimitable expanse of Thought with the telescope of Reason, adding little to human knowledge but speculative theories, the physician is studying the tangible nature that enfolds us—this "temple not built with hands"—deducing therefrom experimental truths that alleviate and improve man's physical condition. These are the lasts that should be as current coin among the people. Why educate your sons and daughters in the speculations of Descartes, Kant, Locke, and Spencer, before they have learned the saws and conditions that govern their physical nature? It is well to study your stomach before you examine the stars. You will succeed better. Dyspeptics are subject to aberrations of sight as well as of thought.
